British Destroyers Stand Guard During Rescue Operations

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—A rescue fleet guarded by the guns of British destroyers was officially reported Monday to have saved all but 32 persons killed by an explosion which sank the Donaldson liner Athenia, which British officials said was torpedoed by a German submarine early Monday in the open North Atlantic. There were 1,347 passengers and crewmen aboard, which included American citizens listed tentatively at 311.

Bulletins from British government agencies failed to give the number of dead. The main basis for hope was the announcement which the Athenia's master Captain James Cook, wirelessed:

"Passengers and crew except those killed by explosion took to boats and were picked up by various ships."

The first disclosure of the attack came from the British Admiralty at 4 a. m. followed an hour later by the statement that the ship was sinking fast.

The next direct word was the announcement of the rescue, from the captain.

Many Ships in Peril
NEW YORK—(AP)—The high seas, particularly the North Atlantic, was jammed with rich liners and vessels as prizes for the warring nations of Europe.

Greatest single item of possible booty among the 51 liners in the Atlantic was the $25,000,000 British Queen Mary, due in New York Monday. Many of her 2,385 passengers, including J. P. Morgan, are Americans fleeing homeward.

The Queen Mary was well into western waters and believed likely to escape the fate of the British liner Lusitania which the Germans torpedoed May 7, 1915, with loss of 1,198 lives. The Lusitania affair is credited with precipitating America's entrance into the World war.

Rumor and speculation centered also on the pride of the Nazi merchant marine, the $20,000,000 Bremen. After a two-day search by American customs agent, she sailed Wednesday.

Germans Deny Sinking
LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—A German news agency release given out here by Baron von Helldorf, the German diplomatic staff Monday vigorously denied Germany was responsible for the sinking of the liner Athenia.

Poles Forced Back; and Allies, Declaring War, Open Fire in the West

WARSAW, Poland—(AP) A communique from the Polish general staff Monday announced the withdrawal of Polish forces from Czystochowa, a town of 120,000 in southwest Poland, after a strong offensive by greatly superior German forces using tanks and heavy artillery.

During the struggle for the town there was a sharp conflict between Polish planes and a German armored unit, official reports said.

Warsaw for the first time since the war's beginning slept through the early morning without an air alarm. About breakfast-time a lone German raider flew overhead, causing a few anti-aircraft gun outbursts which were reported to have brought the German down in flames.

GUNS ON WESTERN FRONT

BRUSSELS, Belgium—(AP)—Heavy gunfire from the direction of the German border, reminiscent of 1914, was heard Monday in Luxembourg.

The firing began early Monday morning. Steel plants and furnaces along the frontier shut down as a measure of precaution.

Meanwhile, King Leopold, ruler of this small country, took personal command of the army, and the cabinet reorganized in an attempt to maintain neutrality. Food rationing was imminent.

FRANCE OPENS ATTACK

PARIS, France—(AP)—France opened land, sea and air "operations" Monday against Germany.

The War Ministry announced the nation's full forces went into action in the campaign to relieve German pressure on France's eastern ally, Poland.

Details of any planned attack to crack Germany's vaunted "west wall" fortifications across from France's Maginot line were withheld.

ITALY STAYS NEUTRAL

ROME, Italy—(AP)—An added indication of Italy's intention to remain neutral in the European war was provided Monday in the announcement that Italian passenger liners would resume sailings in a few days.

BRITISH FLEET MOVES OUT

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Britain's mighty battle fleet took up its battle stations Monday to enforce a blockade of Germany as in the last World war while the guns of her French ally were roaring in the Western front.

The reformed British cabinet hurriedly adopted far-reaching war measures and appointed a high war command.

Here, the great news of the day was the first war loss of a British liner which sank overnight.

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, said on the House of Commons that a German submarine sent the Athenia to the bottom, and angrily accused the Nazis of "inhumane warfare."

GERMAN FREIGHTER CAPTURED

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay—(AP)—Uruguayan coast guard headquarters here said Monday the German freighter Olinda had been captured by the British cruiser Ajax, and not sunk as earlier reported, by the British tanker San Gerardo.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Proclamations by President Roosevelt declaring American neutrality and invoking the neutrality law will be issued within 24 hours, the White House announced Monday.

Department of State officials, meanwhile, said they were looking into the facts regarding the sinking of the British liner Athenia and the airplane bombing of the villa of the American ambassador near Warsaw.

Ambassador Anthony Biddle, Jr., reported to Washington that he believed the bombing of his villa was deliberate.

Wilhelm Studies Great Map of Poland—But He Thinks Hitler "Is Living Dangerously"

DOORN, Holland—(AP)—The former German kaiser, vanquished and exiled by the last World war, followed the new one Sunday night before a gigantic map of Poland hung in the great hall at Doorn.

Methodically and with the precision of one long versed in warfare he placed little colored pins to indicate the positions of the opposing armies, their advances and retreats, the Polish towns bombarded and objectives failing to the German army.

Dove Season in State To Open September 15

The dove season in Arkansas will not opened until September 15, D. N. Graves, secretary of the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission, has announced.

Mr. Graves said many sportsmen were confused over the opening date due to the fact that last year the season opened September 1 and also because the season opened in Texas and Tennessee on September 1.

The open season on dove was set for September 15 to enable further growth of the birds, Mr. Graves pointed out.

Eighty Years of Oil

To a country watching somewhat anxiously the convulsions of the oil industry as it struggles to find a means of operation that will be fair alike to producer, refiner, distributor, and customer, it seems strange to think that the whole oil industry is only 80 years old.

Oil is at the bottom of our economy today, it is at the bottom of world power and military might. Nations fight for it, lie for it, steal for it. The lifeblood that runs in the veins of modern industrial civilization is oil.

So greatly has the world changed since the day, 80 years ago, on August 27, 1859, when dejected "Uncle Billy" Smith was preparing to knock off work. They had been drilling with salt-water drilling apparatus for two months near Titusville, Pa., laboriously forcing the drill deeper with blows of heavy wooden mallets. "Uncle Billy" and his boss, "Col." Edward L. Drake, were pretty discouraged. But that night before he left, "Uncle Billy" happened to glance into the open end of the pipe. He saw that it was almost filled with a thick, blackish liquid.

He didn't even have a bucket to dip out the oil. So he stuffed rags into the end of a rusty tin roof-spout, and began bailing. That was how he drew out the first oil ever produced in the United States.

Eighty years have passed, and a world has been put on wheels by the golden liquid. Millions of dollars have been lost, millions more gained, in the feverish race to discover and produce oil. The United States soon led, and today leads the world in its production.

But with all the plenty which nature hid deep under the ground, we have apparently not learned how to handle it. Because millions of barrels of the precious oil were allowed to run uselessly away or to burn in spectacular torches against the skies, movements were set on foot to regulate oil production.

Throughout all the jumbled history of this regulation, no system has emerged which would prevent the kind of shutdown which now paralyzes a great part of the industry. Thousands of men are without jobs, hundreds of wells are endangered, scores of producers' investments are tottering, because of conflicts between producer, refiner, and distributor which they have not been able to settle in a less drastic way.

Thus far there is no consumer shortage. Nor must there be. For the general rule that applies to many people and things applies also to the oil industry: "Who cannot control himself must submit to control by others."

Don't Sing the Baby to Sleep Or It May Have Insomnia Later On

Everyone likes to have a good night's sleep. Dr. Nathaniel Kleitman of the University of Chicago has made a study of the factors that are most important in bringing on sleep. He can now answer questions that have concerned doctors for many years.

Inadequate feeding, colic, hunger, thirst, temperature of the room, lights and noise are likely to interfere with a baby's sleep. If these obstacles are eliminated, it will be found that babies like to sleep. Many authorities hold that babies cannot get too much sleep. Yet even among babies there are variations.

Doctors agree that methods of putting children to sleep artificially by means of monotonous sensations are not desirable. This includes rocking of babies in cradles, or in the arms, and singing of monotonous lullabies. The latter method is in the nature of hypnotism.

Investigators have found that young children will get enough sleep almost regardless of direction by their parents. Over a long period of time each child finds the normal amount of sleep that it needs, provided of course it is a healthy child.

Authorities are convinced it does not make much difference what hour a child goes to bed, except that it gets enough sleep. One expert feels that children are put to bed early in the evening not for their own benefit, but for the parents to be able to arrange their evening as freely as possible. Thus the baby is put to bed early more to get it out of the way than to give it enough sleep.

Another expert insists that children ought to go to bed later in the winter so they will not wake up in the dark. These views may be revolutionary, but there seems to be a certain amount of truth behind them.

There is a great deal of agitation about the problem of a daytime nap for older children. This is another factor that cannot be regulated by any sort of an absolute law.

Some experts recommend one to two hours a day in bed for children from the ages of six to 13. Doctor Kleitman says afternoon naps should

CLUB NOTES

Allen

The Allen Home Demonstration club held its annual picnic on the regular monthly meeting day, Friday, September 1, 1939 in the lower park at the Experiment Station.

Miss Posey of Little Rock and Miss Fletcher from Clark county were visitors on the occasion. The morning was spent viewing the park and rehearsing a play to be given at the next council meeting.

At noon a delicious picnic lunch, with ice cold drinks was spread, and enjoyed by all.

After lunch a number went boating. Miss Bullington told of her trip to Yellowstone National Park and many other places of interest. Also showed many pictures taken of them, which everyone enjoyed very much.

Miss Fletcher gave instructions on how underground storage houses are built in Clark county. They could be used in this county to keep fruit and vegetables cool in summer as well as safe from freezing in winter.

The demonstration was given by our agent, Miss Bullington. It being how consumers may detect the value of the merchandise they purchase.

It was voted to have a booth at the fair, and a call meeting to be held Friday September 8, at Miss Isabelle Schooley's. Every member is urged to be present and bring their exhibits.

Business Gain, and High Prices, Likely

Business Expansion to Be Followed by Higher Living Costs

NEW ORK.—(AP)—Business expansion and higher prices were seen in financial circles Sunday as probable results of the European war upon the economy of the United States.

Increased employment and a rising national income offset to some degree by higher living costs were seen as developments.

Bankers and business men had been prepared for the news that England and France had declared war by the beginning of German-Polish hostilities Friday. Before leaving their offices for the long Labor Day week-end, they had taken steps in preparation.

These included price jumps in several materials important in international trade and in waging war. Some suppliers withdrew quotations entirely, pending developments.

Steel men said they were unable to contract for future purchases of ferro-nickel, molybdenum and tungsten, vital requirements in making alloys used in armament. Producers would contract to make delivery but would not name prices.

Similar conditions prevailed in sugar, hides, tin, leather, wool goods, wood pulp, burlap, some chemicals and drugs.

Deluge Answers Rain Prayers
Samuel Seldon Partridge started law practice in the village of Phelps, N. Y., in the late 60's, kept at it 50 years. His son, Bellamy, recounts his father's story in a book full of the flavor of that time, "Country Lawyer" (Whitely House: $2.75). It will probably start a deluge of attorney reminiscences, but few should be better. Excepted briefly here is the story of a suit that followed a community prayer for rain.

The case derived primarily from the dry weather of the summer before. For weeks on end not a drop of rain had fallen. The situation was becoming serious when young Mr. Duncan McLeod, the new minister, took matters in hand and organized a huge movement for a collective prayer for rain.

Mr. McLeod's idea was not merely to get the godly people of the town to pray; he wanted every person in the town, good and bad, to get down on their knees at 12 o'clock on a certain Saturday in August and join in one great big town-wide supplication for rain. So complete was his organization that even the saloons, then suspected of being the personal hide-out of the devil, joined in the pause.

It was everywhere felt that the effort had been a great success. By one o'clock there were small clouds in the sky; by two a gusty wind had begun to blow; by four a thunderstorm of cyclonic proportions swept the town, drenching the parched countryside, washing out bridges and igniting with a blot of lightning the largest hay barn of Mr. Phineas Dodd which burned to the ground with its contents a total loss.

Phineas Dodd was the one person in town who had raised his voice against Mr. McLeod's idea. He was opposed on general principles to interfering in the affairs of the Almighty. He was very angry over the loss of his barn and he presented the Reverend, as well as the board of trustees, with a bill for $5000 to cover the loss.

The case came on trail. "Nonsuit granted with costs," Judge Rumsey said. And since that time all the churches in town have felt quite secure in praying for rain whenever they thought that it was needed.

INAUGURATION of trans-Pacific airmail service between United States and New Zealand is expected by mid-September.

Congress, before adjourning, approved an appropriation of $900,000 for the mail contract. Final action by the Civil Aeronautics Authority on Pan-American Airways' application to carry passengers, mail and express over the 8000-mile route was indicated within a few weeks.

The route will extend from San Francisco to Auckland, New Zealand, via Los Angeles, Honolulu, Canton Island, and Noumea, New Caledonia. Four-day schedules call for 49 hours flying time with a full day layover in Honolulu and overnight stops at Canton and Noumea. Present steamer schedules require 15 days for the same voyage.

British Imperial Airways have announced plans to extend service from Australia to New Zealand, providing direct connection with the American line.

Details of the first flight and instructions for addressing covers will be announced later by the Postoffice Department.

Collectors who complain of the abundance of new issues can direct no criticism at Costa Rica. It is 15 months since this Central American nation has released a new stamp and it may be several months before a new postage issue is placed on sale.

Recent issues: Poland, 25th anniversary of Polish Legion; Siam, five stamps, picturing royal palaces; Japan, one value honoring Kamatari Fujiwara, seventh century statesman.

America and Its People Seem Too Good for War

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Washington Correspondent

Bruce Catton has returned to Washington because of the European crisis. Here is his second column from the capital.

WASHINGTON.—No one who returns to Washington at this time, after a tour through the country, can fail to be impressed by the thought that it will be a tremendous tragedy and a colossal blunder if the leadership under here does not find some way of keeping America entirely out of any catastrophe which may befall Europe.

Any trip out into the nation today is bound to give a thoughtful person two firm convictions—

First: in spite of our unsolved problems, we still possess an empire whose riches are almost untapped, comparatively speaking.

Second: the human material the country has to work with is made up of as fine a set of folks as any nation could possibly ask for.

The sheer physical richness of the country fairly hammers on your eyes as you travel.

Your train flashes by great mining areas whose only fault is that they produce too richly. Your car winds through fertile lands whose one flaw is that they are too fertile. Your plane goes over an industrial empire which would be without a flaw if only it wasn't equipped to make more things than the country can handle right now.

and of Wealth
After you have looked at such things day after day, you begin to understand as you never understood before how much our attention and our effort ought to be turned inward, not across the seas—and what a tremendous, lasting boom will get under way once we get the knack of making all of this richness work for us and not against us.

Then there are the people. . . . It isn't just a matter of their being friendly. There's a competence to them, an industry, an inborn desire to get on with one another, which sticks out even in a country which has to worry about strikes and relief labor and economic royalists.

130 Million "Swell Guys"
Those young marines on the train bound for the Camp Perry, O., rifle matches. . . the stewardess on the air-liner. . . the milk strike farmer in upper New York, lean and muscular. . . that Boston banker who joked about his own Yankee caution. . . the politician in Detroit who put his feet on his desk and talked about the piney lakes in upper Michigan. . . the North Carolina newspaper publisher who wasn't above inviting a comparative stranger to stay over a day and go deep-sea fishing.

They're pretty grand people, those, and the 130-odd million like them. We don't know our luck. We've got everything. Over in Europe the thunder-heads are blotting out the sun; maybe it's going to be night over there for a long while, a night filled with terrible things, the flames of stricken cities and the cries of anguished children.

But we—we can miss it, we must miss it, we've got to miss it—because, over here, we're waiting for the dawn.

Carr Seeks To Uncover Labor Deal Between Union Officials and Producers

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD.—The assignment of Special Assistant Attorney General Charles H. Carr to do a little income-tax sleuthing in Movietown has introduced a case of jitters in a surprising number of quarters. You'd think, from all the indignation howls and premature protestations of innocence, that Carr was about to ask for a blanket indictment of everybody in town.

Actually the red-headed young representative of the Department of Justice is looking into a single incident—the alleged $100,000 payoff, or buy-off, of a union official by a producer. It's true that if such a bribe could be proven, there might be a lot of embarrassing complications:

(1) Violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act; (2) violation of the so-called anti-racketeering act; (3) conspiracy to violate the Wagner Labor Act. In case of prosecution on any of these charges, all the major studios in the industry would be co-defendants, because they all were represented in the labor negotiations of 1937.

Even this situation wouldn't be so embarrassing to Hollywood if it were not that the Federal investigation comes at a time of critical inter-union warfare in the movie business. The dominant organization here is the IATSE (International Association of Theatrical Stage Employees), an A. F. of L. affiliate which includes 10 local unions of technicians and studio workmen, and which recently tried to take in the actors, too. Its supremacy

United Studio Technicians' Guild, which is financed by the C. I. O. The National Labor Relations Board has promised a Hollywood plebiscite to determine which outfit shall represent studio labor.

Probe May Hurt IATSE
If the Department of Justice investigation should prove that IATSE members were sold out to the producers by William Bioff, who represented the union in negotiating a wage-and-hour agreement in the 1937 crisis, that union would be pretty thoroughly discredited. If discredited, it might lose the Labor Board election to C. I. O. and the producers wouldn't like that at all. They have just been working out a new five-year agreement with the A. F. of L. people.

Whatever it is of no concern whatever to Assistant Attorney General Carr. At first he was amused by the procession of bellowing Hollywood officials and movie company representatives who called to accuse him and his boss, Attorney General Frank Murphy, of trying to deliver Hollywood into the hands of the C. I. O. The majority of the local press and the movie trade papers are hysterical about this "attack by the government on the peace and prosperity of the industry." They argue that because studio workers are well paid it is unthinkable that they may have been sold down the river by an unscrupulous union representative.

Carr is no longer amused by the storm that has been caused by his coming to Hollywood. He is thoroughly tired of explaining that if his presence here in the pursuit of some pretty well authenticated monkey-business happens to coincide with a local squabble, "It's just too bad."

"I don't care a hoot in hell," he tells them, "whether you belong to the A. F. of L., the C. I. O. or the XYZs."

And he does tell them—and plenty. This reporter interviewed Carr in his office, but was asked not to quote him directly. He said that one of these days he may issue a statement that will identify the meddlers and make clear his middle-of-the-road position.

Desk-Pounders Don't Worry Carr
The young man from Memphis, Tenn., by way of Vanderbilt and Yale, and six years of federal service, is not in the least impressed by the plethoric, desk-pounding tactics of the gents whose Hollywood supremacy is largely vocal. He can cuss as volubly as any of them. Having handled some labor cases in the east, during three years as an assistant attorney general in the criminal division of the Department of Justice, he is pretty well fed up with union quarrels.

Before being sent to Washington, he was an assistant U. S. attorney in Los Angeles, where he successfully prosecuted the William F. Gettle kidnappers (who are serving life terms), the mail fraud case which involved Appellate Judge Gavin W. Craig, and Tony Corcoran, the bootleg baron who recently has been in the news as the admiral of the gambling ship fleet.

Carr has no organized staff here, although he can call in all the internal revenue agents he wishes. He says, too, that he has no immediate plans, but is merely holding a series of conversations with a lot of uneasy people before his campaign is formulated. He is not figuring on a special grand jury, but may have plenty of work for the regular one when it convenes.

He has been specifically ordered by Attorney General Murphy to look into labor racketeering charges involving union officials and the Association of Motion Picture Producers, headed by Joseph M. Schenck.

He also has been ordered to investigate possible income tax violations by Schenck, chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox; Darryl Zanuck, vice president in charge of production; William Goetz, assistant to Zanuck and a large stockholder in the company; William B. Dover, former business agent for amuck, and several underlying employees of these executives.

The men named are believed to figure in the government's scrutiny of the complicated deal in May, 1935, by which 20th Century and Fox were merged. Tangled up in that was an item of some $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 which the Department of Justice believes went into a few pockets without being taxed.

Neutrality Law

He said a German plane dumped six bombs on his and adjoining villas from a low altitude just before it came out of a power dive.

Plea for Unity
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Pleading that America face Europe's havoc with "national unity," not selfish partisanship, President Roosevelt Sunday promised the nation his utmost effort to "get the best of it."

"As long as it remains within my power to prevent," he said in a broadcast address, "there will be no black-out of peace in the United States."

A neutrality proclamation is in process of preparation in accordance with international law, he said. It will be followed, he added by another invoking the country's neutrality law, which bans shipments of articles of war to the belligerents.

"I trust that in the days to come our neutrality can be made a true neutrality," he asserted.

He did not say anything about a special session of congress to revise the law, although he is generally expected to call such a session.

Essentially, the speech was an expression of the view that a war anywhere endangers peace everywhere, that economically, the European conflict will lay a heavy hand upon the United States but that by diligent effort the United States can be kept out of the melee.

Much attention centered upon Mr. Roosevelt's plea that "partisanship and selfishness be adjourned; and that national unity be the thought that underlies all others."

I raised the question whether the president contemplated a truce with the dissident elements of his own party and his foes among the Republicans. Was he, many asked, ready to make peace at home?

night for Bremerhaven without passengers. Although the British admiralty denied tonight a report that the Bremen had been seized, two British naval vessels known to have been in United States coastal waters disappeared Wednesday night and were believed likely to have followed the Bremen, one of the largest passenger vessels afloat. Her sister ship the Europa was in port in Germany.

Recalling America's seizure of the Vaterland in the World War, Nazi shipping men were worried over the Bremen's delay here by the customs. The Vaterland remained the Leviathan, carried 96,804 American soldiers to Europe to battle Germany in 1917-18.

The French kept the Normandie at a New York pier, her departure indefinitely postponed. They value her at $60,000,000. She was expected to remain in port.

Bill of Succession Hinted
There is no doubt, in the minds of many, that a dream of restoring the Hohenzollerns to power in Germany inspires the ex-kaiser in his patient charting of the war's course.

Not for himself, does he dream, say those who have access to the Doorn household, but for his favorite grandson, Prince Louis Ferdinand.

The story is frequently told that a bill of succession has existed for several years, tucked away perhaps until one day it can be signed. If such a paper exists, it may have been among those piled high on the huge, oak table over which the ex-kaiser bent this afternoon with a large reading glass to pore through atlases.

Still an Active Man
Books, maps, newspapers and the radio provide the old man of Doorn with information. He followed the Spanish Civil war and keeps abreast of the Japanese campaign in China as part of his daily routine.

"In good health, he has always found it difficult to adjust himself to the inactive life of Doorn," is a remark attributed to his wife, Princess Hermine, who, with one of her daughters, is now with the ex-kaiser here.

Rapid War Moves LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Great Britain and France went to war against Germany Sunday. Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement of the momentous decision was followed quickly by a series of moves to place the nation on a wartime basis.

The announcement came 15 minutes after the expiration of an 11 a. m. ultimatum to the Nazi government to withdraw from invaded Poland. France joined her old ally just five minutes after her own 5 p. m. deadline passed.

In a weary voice that sometimes faltered, Chamberlain announced Britain's fateful decision in a broadcast to the Empire. He was followed by King George, who broadcast an appeal to his subjects to stand fast in the hour of conflict.

Eden and Churchill

Prime Minister Chamberlain at once formed a new wartime government which took in former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden as dominions secretary and which included Winston Churchill as first lord of the Admiralty. The Admiralty announced that the Duke of Kent, youngest brother of King George, had taken a war appointment, the nature of which was not disclosed.

The king approved appointments of Lord Gort as commander-in-chief of the British field forces; Maj. Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside as chief of the Imperial Defense Staff, and Sir Walter Kirke as commander-in-chief of the home forces.

E Poland Is Glad

WARSAW, Poland.—(AP)—Tremendous crowds enacted memorable scenes of enthusiasm Sunday when they learned of British-French declarations of war that brought the assistance of powerful allies in the war against Germany. The scenes still were in progress all over Poland Sunday despite grim reminders of war already in progress.

It took repeated radio warnings against possible air attacks to clear the streets of wildly cheering and singing crowds.

In their enthusiasm the crowds found themselves gathering around even the neutral embassies, including that of the United States where they chanted: "Long live the United States." Finally Ambassador Anthony Joseph Drexel Eddle, Jr., appeared and waved from a window.

The automobile of a British military attaché was later deluged with flowers as he drove along a street.

Russia Is Neutral

MOSCOW, Russia.—(AP)—Sources close to the Soviet government emphasized Sunday that they expected to remain neutral in a European war. They hinted that in no case would their army assist Germany's. However, these sources said they expected to lend economic aid both to Germany and her foes.

British and French declarations of war against Germany made a deep impression on Soviet Russia. Precautionary measures including the requisitioning of certain foodstuffs were said to have been taken. There has been no mobilization order but an undischarged number of reserves was ordered to register at once in case they are needed.

The fact that Britain and France jointly had gone to war with Germany, until recently considered a powerful potential enemy of Russia, made such an impression here that it might have a great influence on Soviet policy.

The average man could not picture himself fighting side-by-side with Germany with whom Soviet Russia concluded a non-aggression pact August 21. He expected Russia to remain neutral but did not exclude the possibility of entering the war on the side of Britain and France.

Poise and Not Mental Effort Makes Stars, Says Veteran

By HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor NEW YORK—There is no such thing as a "smart" football player.

At least that is what Wallace Wade, famous coach of Duke University, tells a coaching school in the Man Building at the World's Fair.

"It doesn't require a deep intellect to carry out an assignment according to the coaches' teaching," says the old Brown Blue who has taught the gridiron game with such great success in Dixie.

"What well-coached, alert players have," Wade points out, "is poise." In his opinion, when a player is referred to as "smart," he is stressing "poise," not mental effort.

Wade tells the coaches that the most difficult thing to teach a football player is to keep his feet. The Durham strategist points out that most players fall down because when on defense they are off balance most of the time.

So he tells the student-coaches that the first knowledge to instill in players is to stay on their pins.

Charley Brickley, immortal Harvard drop-kicker and his sons, Chic and Bud, put on a remarkable demonstration of drop and place-kicking.

Charley Brickley Starts

Sons Young

Chic Brickley, 18, the more skillful of the two boys, reveals his dad's formula for developing a drop-kicker and at the same time tells how he obtained his nickname.

"My father started to teach me how to kick when I was six months old," relates Chic. "He would put a balloon in my crib and tell me to kick it. Of course, I couldn't speak very well, and so whenever he said 'kick' I would answer 'chie.' When I was six my father drew a circle on the barn wall and we would practice for hours kicking the ball inside the circle.

"I made my best and longest drop-kick last fall against Fordham Prep... 52 yards, and from a pretty bad angle."

Chic and Bud, who is 17, graduated from Bronxville High in June and were outstanding members of the school's undefeated eleven. Chic held down fullback and Bud one of the tackles. Chic looks more like his father, who once booted five straight field goals in one game to beat Yale 15-0. He weighs 187 pounds and stands just over six feet.

Yale to Two Brickleys Though younger, Bud is much bigger, coming in at 220 pounds and measuring nearly six feet three inches.

First the family demonstrated how "easy" it is to drop-kick the ball between the goal posts... each monotonously booting the ball between the uprights.

But this was old stuff to them and too simple, so they started to "shoot" for the basket on the court at the other end of the field. None "sank" one, but they plucked the ball against the rim and backboard.

Only the oval shape of the ball prevented it from dropping in for a "basket."

Despite the fact that their dad wrote football history at Harvard, Chic and Bud are trying to get into Yale. Bud is first going to Cheshire Academy for a year, but Chic is already making plans to be on the Eli freshman squad this fall.

The Yale idea is there because the boys are determined to climb the ladder of success on their own.

New York Gets Forfeit After Sox Win First Contest

BOSTON.—(AP)—The New York Yankees were awarded the second game of a double-header with the Red Sox, 9 to 6, on a forfeit Sunday when 27,000 fans flooded the field with bottles and straw hats, protesting that the league leaders were attempting to beat the Sunday "curfew" law.

After dropping the first game 12 to 11—their seventh straight defeat at the hands of the Red Sox—the Yankees forged out front 7 to 5 in the first half of the eighth inning of the second game.

As clocks neared 6:30 p. m. when Sunday games must end under Massachusetts law, two Yankees in succession trotted toward home from third base and were tagged out. Failure to finish the inning would have caused the score to revert to the 5 to 5 tie at the end of the seventh.

When the New Yorkers took the field for the last half of the eighth with only 10 minutes to go, fans let loose with the barrage. Umpire-in-chief Cal Hubbard then forfeited the game to the Yankees on the charge the Boston management had failed to provide proper protection to allow the game to go on.

I ran over and killed one chicken," said he would protest what he termed the "get out quick" tactics of the Yankers. Ted Williams, Boston's star rookie, hit two home runs. Cronin, Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gordon each connected for one.

DiMaggio slipped running out an infield roller in the first inning of the opener and retired with a slight knee injury, but he returned in the second game and besides his homer, got two singles.
